No. 26.

EVERYBODY IS WANTED

To Become Interested in Building Salubria Springs Hotel.

IS NOT A PIPE DREAM.

Pembroke People Enthusiastic Over Proposed Summer Resort.

Interest in the proposition to make Salubria Springs a summer resort is still on the increase, and there will be no abatement. The members of the hotel company are intensely in earnest and the early completion of the hotel may be regarded a certainty. This is not a pipe dream, but is a sound, business proposition, made by business men, and is meeting with the success calculated to show results in the next few months.

The proposition to the masses is such that it should have the consideration of all who have a little spare money on hand. It will prove an investment that will bring returns. But, aside from this, the proposition appeals to those who would like to have a home of their own where they can take their wives and children during the heated term and give them the advantage of the daily use of the health-giving waters of the noted springs, over 50 in number, that bubble up in the area that will surround the contemplated hotel.

But the great liberality of the organized company is commendable in that they seek to interest the greater number instead of benefiting the few. If they had chosen they could have shut out everyone but themselves, and been the sole beneficiaries of the financial advantages to accrue from building a large hotel and "bleeding" the guests of a popular resort, which is practiced everywhere today. They seek nothing of the kind. They want everybody who can to join them in the enterprise, and as an inducement have put the price of the lots so low that almost anybody can get a lot, whether they elect to build on it or not. The lots are only $75 each, and until a certain number are taken every purchaser will be given, absolutely given, one share ($25) in the preferred stock of the hotel. Nothing could be fairer than this.

This city should take freely of the stock and be liberal purchasers of the lots also. In fact, to a man of ordinary sagacity and business ideas, it is something that should be "jumped at" by our people, bankers and business men. All of them should encourage the company in every way possible. The Commercial club might almost immortalize itself by putting its shoulder to the wheel and pushing the matter. The five banks of the city might determine to take a dozen lots each, and thus, to some extent, "shut out" foreign capital, which has been preached about in connection with every enterprise that has claimed public attention for the past three years.

"Foreign capital" is pretty much a myth in this section and the hotel company is not chasing butterflies. It wants our own people interested. Pembroke capital can take care of the whole proposition, but so closely is the interest of our enterprising neighbor identified with that of Hopkinsville that it is far better that the two should, as nearly as possible, have the springs and the property surrounding them in their own hands.

One thing alone should cause our people to come promptly to the front in the matter and do even more than is asked: For a decade longer than that—much has been said and written about a park, and so essential was a place for public recreation, regarded that the city, some years ago, actually bought the "cedar grove," east of the city, for park purposes. But we need a park now more than that. Why not have a park at Salubria? It is just the right distance from the city for a pleasant drive. When the electric cars begin to run from the city to Pembroke it will be "just the thing" to go out any evening, and the ride would be enjoyed as much as anything else, if not a little more. Somebody may say that an electric car line from here to Pembroke is "all talk." We are convinced that it is not. From what we have heard the cars can almost be seen in the distance and are headed this way. The future prosperity of Hopkinsville lies in the direction of pembroke, thence on to other points, one after another. Pembroke people are in earnest and when they begin a thing they always finish up the job to a nicety. They never give up. They are neighbors who are holding out to the neighboring hand to us. "Let's shake."

FATAL CASE.

Mr. J. T. Fleming Dies of La Grippe.

Mr. J. T. Fleming, a well known citizen of the Herndon neighborhood, died Wednesday after an illness of about a month of the grip. He was in the 68th year of his age and was a man held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. Mr. Fleming had been a member of the Baptist church for many years. He is survived by several children, Mrs. D. W. Hanbery, of this city, being one of them. One of his sons, Dowell Fleming, is a Presbyterian minister. Rev. J. A. Kirtley held funeral services at his late residence Thursday and the interment took place in the family burying ground.

JAMESTOWN FUND CROWING

Christian County Has Contributed $375.00 So Far.

$166 MORE IS NEEDED.

Pembroke People are Asked to Raise $100 and Committee Named.

Mayer Meacham yesterday forwarded to Col. Jno. B. Atkinson, president of the Jamestown Commission for Kentucky, $144.25 collected this week. The banks had previously sent $80 and the mills $120, and the Forbes Manufacturing Co. $30 in furnishings for the building, making $375.00, not counting the two car loads of logs for one of the block-houses. About $166 is still needed to complete the county's quota. A committee of Pembroke citizens, with J. W. Cross at the head, has been added to the county committee and they will probably raise $100 at Pembroke. A further effort will be made here to raise at least another $100. If you have not contributed, you still have a chance to do so.

JAIL DELIVERY, THREE ESCAPE.

The New Jail Fails to Hold a Trio of Negro Prisoners.

BAR SAWED IN TWO.

They Were Probably Aided by Confederates on the Outside.

Three negro prisoners escaped from the new county jail Thursday morning, within fifteen minutes after being detailed to sweep the corridor, soon after breakfast. After they had crawled through a hole in a window only eight or ten inches wide and made good their escape, Harrison Alexander, the Greenville negro under death sentence for rape gave the alarm from his cell and Jailer Johnson found that one of the steel bars of a rear window had been sawed in two in the lower part of the window, in two places, and the men had crawled through the hole, stepped out on a coal house shed under the window and escaped easily to the ground and disappeared under the bank of the river.

The bars were supposed to be saw proof and it would have been impossible for the negroes to have sawed the bar out in the few minutes they were left alone. The jailer believes the bar had been sawed from the outside and left hanging in its place and that the negroes carried out a well laid plan to escape. They were: Kirk Bush and Merida Coleman, charged with shooting with intent to kill, and Ed Lasco, held for horse stealing. All had been indicted and were waiting trial.

Jailer Johnson offers a reward of $25 each for their capture. Thursday the town marshal at Nortonville captured Coleman and yesterday morning Jailer Johnson went to Nortonville and brought him back. He says Bush had been gone some time when he saw the hole and could not resist the temptation to crawl out.

Miss Hallie Southerland's Engagement Announced.

The engagement of Miss Hallie Southerland is announced in a dispatch from Washington. She will be married some time in May to Senor Alfredo Alcazar Calderon, first secretary of the Peruvian legation and son of a former Minister from Peru. Miss Southerland is the younger daughter of Commander W. H. H. Southerland and is a grand-daughter of the late Dr. James Rodman. She possesses unusual beauty and many accomplishments.

KENTUCKY ELOQUENCE.

Book of Best Speeches of Blue Grass Orators.

Miss Hines, of Russellville, was here a few days ago taking subscriptions for "Kentucky Eloquence Past and Present" issued in January by the George G. Fetter Co., Louisville. The price of the book is $5.00. The preparation of this book was largely a labor of love, as the edition was limited and sold largely by subscription. Every Kentuckian should be proud of this book. It contains the best efforts of Kentuckians for a hundred years. Many of the speeches are gems that deserve a place in every Kentucky library. Miss Hines sold several books here.

The GAMUT of FASHIONS

FOR EARLY SPRING WEAR

How will we look when we have seriously adopted the "leg o' mutton" sleeve? This is a question we women folks are forced to ask ourselves, for we are surely, and not at all slowly, awaying in that direction, and many of the sleeves of the day-after-to-morrow, if not of to-morrow itself, will be fashioned on the lines of those worn long ago.

And speaking of things of yesterday, I am reminded that we are threatened with a revival of the crinoline, but that "wolf" does not frighten me, very greatly! We shall probably wear specially arranged petticoats in order that our skirts may hang softly and "flare" in the desired manner but this does not mean a revival of the crinoline; rather, I think, does it mean a revival of that most admirable style of walking costume which was in vogue when Letty Lind first took the London theater-going people by storm: The round skirt, which clears the ground without being at all short, and the skilfully pleated petticoats which hold the skirt in correct position and which give an eminently fascinating impression of foamy laces and masses of and attractive. I have described it because it represents, fairly correctly the style of afternoon frock we shall find ourselves wearing this coming summer. All the leading points of the 1882 dress will be the fashionable points of the season—including the generously flounced petticoats and the round skirt, which suggests, in a subtle way, the presence of a small crinoline!

I have been interviewing a number of the new millinery models, and have been struck by the amount of water and flowered ribbons used on their decoration; in many cases the low crowns are circled by loops of ribbon each loop of exactly the same size as its fellow, and the whole effect very precise and prim!

The ultra-long ostrich feather, for carriage and afternoon wear, is assuming fantastic proportions. It is immensely long, immensely thick, immensely supple, and—immensely costly.

One or two of the new models for morning wear reminded me of the quaint old "Dolly Varden" fashions—the flat brim in front and the upward tilt at the back. One dear little hat of this order was of fine gray felt, the gathered crown composed of flowered taffetas which showed pale blue designs on a pale gray ground, and a length of darker blue satin ribbon crossing the crown and brim and tying behind under a coil of hair.

The panel is going to play a very important role in the world of evening dresses this coming season. It will be seen, covered with elaborate embroideries, on the fronts of satin velvet gowns and it will also be seen on seams of gown skirts—both then alter the manner of the panels on one of the splendid evening dresses worn by Rejane in "La Savieille."

A distinct novelty is a white cloth gown trimmed with pearl-gray suede and embroidered with pearl-gray silks.

In our large illustration the tailor-made costume is of blue serge edged with black satin ribbon. The vest is of gray cloth embroidered in blue. The second figure displays a new motor coat made out of dust-covered cloth. The double-breasted vest forms part of the coat.

But now to turn to the somber side of life, let us talk briefly of mourning clothes which are ever among the necessities of life, but which should be approached warily. It is a great mistake to take to buy a number of black clothes in a hurry and, at the moment when grief is uppermost and costume seems a minor matter, consciously tire some. The ready-made black skirt and the ready-made accordion-pleated or tucked black skirt worn with a white lawn collar and a black leather belt should be recognized at once as fulfilling the immediate need. Very new and smart black clothes look out of place at a funeral and it is far better to wear an old black coat than a new one, while an old black hat draped with black lace or black chiffon may do good service for the somber ceremony. The matron who has to go into mourning has to think of indoor clothes, and it is quite possible at such a time to buy a ready-made towagon coating but a few dollars and worthy of wear. Cashmere for the thrifty and crepe de Chine for the prodigal should be the fact of mourning, while it will make a far more becoming effect than a dress which is entirely black.

White Cloth Coat and Skirt.

It is trimmed with black and white braid and the vest is made of black and white striped silk.

Grande mouline with each movement of the wearer. It is impossible to picture a more satisfactory and becoming style of afternoon walking-dress, for rince and summer wear, than this. I have before me as I write a little water-color portrait of a girl in a garden party frock of the 1882 period. The skirt round and very full at the bottom, but over the hips the fabric is material Indian mullin in a delicate shade of coral pink and a series of gathered flounces reaching from the hem to about 12 inches below the waistline. A number of beautifully made petticoats—fashioned in the style of those worn by "skirt dancers"—held the skirt in correct position, and the cross-over bodice displayed a delicate little chemise of lace in front. There was a shaped waistband, composed of coral pink and very pale blue ribbons, the long ends falling loose at the left side, and altogether the whole dress was charming

THE WEATHER.

FOR KENTUCKY—Generally fair and warmer Thursday.

Mayor Barth, of Louisville, will appoint Chas. F. Grainger to succeed Chas. R. Long as president of the water company.

The Supreme Court of Tennessee will hear the big contempt case next Tuesday and decide whether or not the House of Representatives has the power to punish the city council for contempt. The question is a new one for the courts.

The Court of Appeals, by a unanimous opinion, declared unconstitutional and void the act of the legislature passed in 1905, redistricting the State and creating 100 legislative districts. The court holds that the act does not give equal representation to all and orders that the next election be held under the old law.

U. S. MARSHAL

Arrested and Handcuffed the Wrong Man.

A deputy United States Marshal caused a sensation at the Keach Furniture establishment yesterday morning which will not soon be forgotten by the colored porter at Keach's. While Walter Greenwade was in the carpet department the government officer, as we are told, entered the room, drew his gun on Greenwade and told him to consider himself under arrest. The negro "considered" and then the officer slipped handcuffs on his wrists.

Of course the negro, who has been employed at Keach's about a year, and is a faithful, trusty fellow, didn't know why he had been arrested. Harry Keach happened to come in just at the right time and inquired into the affair. It seems that the government officers have been on the lookout for a negro by the name of Elliott, who is wanted at Owensboro for some offense against the government. The arresting officer was in the city Thursday trying to spot Elliott and was down at Keach's warehouse during the day. Greenwade so fully came up to the description of Elliott that the officer thought he had found his man.

When Harry Keach stated to the officer that Greenwade had been in his employ ever since long before the alleged offense was committed, and that he had been, for some time previous to coming to his house as porter, employed by several different people in the city, the officer promptly removed the bracelets from the negro's wrists and started out on his quest for the man wanted.

A GRAND PANORAMA.

Way Up in Mid-Air are Seen Things Unknown

GREATER HOPKINSVILLE

Something About Its Growth and What it is Sure To Be

Away up in the air, nearly a hundred feet from terra firma, so high that the head almost whirls and a kind of bewilderment gets possession of one as he looks earthward, he gets a birds-eye view of Hopkinsville. As the vision sweeps from the stand-point on the north, round west to that portion of the city "over the river," then round to the Bethel Female College, then farther south, the gaze resting on Main and Virginia, onward the view stretches round to South Kentucky College, completing the circle as the eye then rests at the starting point, you cannot but exclaim, "What a big town!"

Then you begin to locate certain points and single out the more pretentious buildings. You cannot fail to notice the improvements going on in every direction. In one bunch you see half a dozen or more new buildings going up on 13th street, back of James West and B. W. Harnd. On the slope southward from South Kentucky College are numerous cottages in process of completion. Trains are seen coming in or going out in all directions, smoke rolls up in curling black volumes from stacks of mills, shops, etc., while blooming fruit trees stand pleasantly out in the panoramic view stretched out before the one who has oil enough in his lower joints to enable him to "get up in the world" by climbing "up a winding stair" to the top of the Climax Mills.

It's well worth the effort to reach a vantage point that gives you a full view of the city, for your imagination, no matter how vivid, cannot draw a correct picture of the growth of the city in all directions without getting a glance of the grand panorama.

As you look immediately around your perch in mid-air everything seems on the move. The huge plant of the American Snuff Co., covering a large area, claims your attention. You hear the puff of the engine and men are seen moving about everywhere, teamsters are urging their animals to a rapid pace and everything is bustle, but not confusion. Next you take a look at the building of the new wagon factory of the Forbes Manufacturing company. You stand amazed at the magnitude of the undertaking of the company and you speculate as to what may be its future. You knew it was the largest concern in this section of the State, but were altogether unprepared to see as big a building as they will soon have completed.

Descending to the lower stories of the Climax Mills you find yourself in one room where there are about a dozen mills in two rows. The room is full of men putting the mills in position, putting up shafting and engaged in other works. In another room you find a lot of mill-wrights and carpenters as busy as bees. Then you go down ten or twelve feet under the earth, which is the bottom of the concrete bins for storing wheat. There are ten of these bins, all having a common base, and they remind you of a huge chimney full of flues. They are to run upward 94 feet, and their combined storage capacity will be 70,000 bushels of grain. Concrete bins have many advantages over the old style wood and iron ones. They are reinforced with steel and defy cyclones and hurricanes, they cannot burn, any of the ten can be used at will, wheat does not spoil in them and the insurance of the contents is reduced to the minimum.

There are now about 80 men employed about the mills and Mr. Ross A. Rogers, the manager, though a strenuous man, has his hands more than full directing the small army of employees. But everybody about has to keep busy, for time is passing fast now and everything must be completed by about June 1st for the new crop of wheat. Then "the grind" will begin and the new mills are going to do their share of it. They will start with a capacity of 400 barrels a day, but the mammoth engine will have power to do 50 per cent. more work when occasion demands it.

Four additional car loads of machinery were expected to arrive by to-day. The company is continually on the rush, and it has been ever since the contracts for the building and machinery of different kinds were let. Everything that genius can devise for the production of the highest grade of flour has been secured by the company and its output will be of the character demanded by the southern trade. Hopkinsville now has four large flour mills and yet there is more than room for all of them. The concerns are too large to think of small things in business but all will hustle for the trade of the South. Rivalry will be out of the question, but honest competition will insure for all of them the sale of every barrel of flour they can turn out. AND HOME CAPITAL IS AT THE BOTTOM! Let us have more new enterprises backed up by home men and home capital.

Impure blood runs you down—makes you an easy victim for organic diseases. Burdock Blood Bitters purifies the blood—cures the cause—builds you up.

JAMESTOWN CONTEST

CLOSE IN DISTRICT 1

Less Than 60 Days Until the Winners Will Be Known.

The Kentuckian's Jamestown contest is showing a steady increase in interest as the time grows shorter. Since last report about 1,000 votes have been cast and several contestants have made big gains. It is evident that the contests will soon narrow down to two or three in each district and that there will be much display of reserve strength as the end draws near.

Successful Farmers!

This will Interest You!

The above cut represents Clark's Double Action Cutaway Harrow. This is truly a remarkable tool. The following statements in regard to it have been thoroughly demonstrated:

It will cut from 28 to 30 acres, or will double cut 15 acres in a day. It is drawn by two medium horses. It will move 15,000 tons of earth one foot in a day. It can be set so as to move the earth but little, or at so great an angle as to move all the earth one foot. It keeps the surface true and the machine runs true in line of draft. This cannot be said of any other disc harrows.

The Clark Cutaway Harrows will cut and reduce the toughest sod to plant food quickly without the aid of a plow. Clark's Cutaway Harrows are intense and perfect cultivators of soil and are money makers. Every crop is increased 25 to 50 per cent. by their use. 300,000 farmers are now using them. The Journal Boxes are made of hard wood, soaked in oil, and will outwear any metal. The Disks are cutlery steel and never break. We also sell Clark's Cutaway Plows.

THE THIEF ON THE CROSS

Subject of a Most Powerful Sermon Last Thursday Night

WARNING TO MEN

Christ's Saving Him was a Lesson of God's Mercy

As previously announced, Evangelist Sellers, Thursday night, preached on the thief being saved on the cross. As it was not possible for the man to have been baptized before his death, many people were curious to know how Mr. Sellers would handle that phase of his subject. The audience room, if possible, was more closely packed than at any other time during the week.

In glowing words he pictured the scene on calvary, dwelling at length on the two malefactors condemned to suffer with the Lord. The preacher believes that they were sinners of the deepest dye, and though both of them were all that they had been convicted of being, yet the one who called upon Christ at the very last moment had been raised by a pious Jewish mother, but after getting out into the world had wandered away from the God of his fathers. He had doubtless heard of Jesus and his miracles and may have seen him up among the Judean hills, and while hanging on the cross realized that he was the Messiah expected by the Jews. There is no question as to his being saved, but it was a lesson to lost humanity of the great mercy of God. There is nothing in the whole word of God like it, and there will never be another such exhibition of God's mercy.

The preacher most impressively warned men against taking the risk of putting off the question of obtaining salvation to the last moment. He does not believe in death-bed repentance and there are cases when men, who thought they were dying, had made great promises if God would spare their lives, and after being restored to health had gone back on every pledge they had made, and at last died miserable sinners. And again a man sometimes puts off the great question until the death hour, and then he does not care to be saved.

From many view-points this was the most powerful and intensely interesting sermon yet delivered by Mr. Sellers. A man cannot be more deeply in earnest than the evangelist and at times his words glowed with almost irresistible power of conviction to those out of the kingdom. Yet the message seemed to fall on dull ears, as only one answer was made when the invitation was given. An old man, a former member of the Christian church elsewhere, who had been called back to God during Mr. Birch's work here, went forward and was received into membership.

Services will be held today at 3:30 and 7:30 o'clock as usual. The afternoon service will be especially for children. However, older persons are invited.

Mr. Sellers will preach tonight on the question "Shall We Know Each other there?"

On Sunday services will be held as follows:

9:30—Sunday school service. Mr. Sellers will speak.

10:45—Sermon by Mr. Sellers and solo by Miss Berry.

2:30—Sermon by Mr. Sellers, to men only, on "Fetters of Brass."

4:00—Sermon by Mr. Sellers, to women only, on "A Woman's Power."

7:30—Closing service of the revival. Sermon by Mr. Sellers on "Heaven's Greatest Invitation."

Miss Berry will sing at five services.

EDWARD P. ELLIOTT

Entertained a Large and Appreciative Audience.

When Mr. Elliott started out for a fulfillment of his engagements for the present season he was preparing to give the people the best parts of the new and popular American play, "The Lion and the Mouse." This play is now the most popular, probably, on the American stage, but has not been presented here this season. Much to the gratification of our people Mr. Elliott, Thursday night at the tabernacle, gave us several scenes from the famous play. Much as was expected of the man so eminent in his profession, all expectations were more than realized. For an hour and a half he entertained his audience in a manner that stamped him as the true reader and actor. He assumed the part of seven characters in "The Lion and the Mouse," and each was acted out to perfection. Mr. Elliott, so far as we have heard, pleased everybody, and all will be only too glad for Manager McPherson to secure him for the next season's course.

The Dunbar Co., a male quartette, and bell ringers, are to fill No. 8 of the tabernacle course, May 17 in their date, which closes the engagements for this current season.

HOG CHOLERA

The Hog worm is the most Dangerous foe of the Hog

In almost every outbreak of cholera you will find the hogs very wormy. They get a hog out of condition and unthrifty. Then he is an easy prey to disease. The Snoddy Remedy will destroy every character of hog worm. Even the liver and lung worm, which are the most dangerous, are easily destroyed with the Snoddy Remedy. Ten cents worth of the Snoddy Remedy will clear out the worms and purify the blood of a hundred pound shoat, so that he will be worth one dollar or more in a few weeks than he would have gained without this remedy.

Can't you afford to invest ten cents per head to make your shoats worth a dollar per head more than they will without this little investment? Then why waste time and feed on wormy runty hogs when it is easy to have them thrifty? It also prevents and cures Hog Cholera. Any practical farmer can stop the worst outbreak of cholera that ever came with it and restore his herd to thrift in a few days' time.

It is used and endorsed by the leading hog raisers of the country. Snoddy's free book on the care and management of hogs, so as to keep them thrifty and clear of cholera or worms, can be had by calling on The Planters Hdw. Co. Inc., Hopkinsville, Ky., and E. W. Segar & Dixon, Massville, Ky. They also keep the remedy for sale.

CREATORE

And His Famous Band will Be Here April 5th

Great Musical Treat for All Reduced Rates on Railroads.

Creatore and His Band have played several times in the large Convention Hall at Canton, Ohio, and have to play there again on the present tour. Manager Howard Pew urged the local manager recently to send his order for printing and advertising matter, and was surprised to receive a letter in response which said "Don't send us any advertising matter. The people already know that Creatore is to be here, and we will have hard work keeping them away." We believe this is something unusual in the entertainment business.

CREATORE IN NEW YORK. Creatore and his Band played 44 concerts in New York during the present season up to the time of leaving New York, February 11th, for a concert tour of the west. The success of the concerts in the New York Hippodrome was wonderful. This is the largest regular theatre in the world having 5,200 seats and standing room for many more. Notwithstanding its enormous size, the Hippodrome was crowded, and Creatore was loudly cheered for the grand music of his concerts.

FORM NEW SOCIETY
SAILORS WHO SERVED ON SMALL GUNBOATS ORGANIZE.

Seek to Preserve the Fellowship of War Time-To Be Known as Ancient and Honorable Order of Sons of Gunboats.

As long as men find themselves thrown together in any particular enterprise and with one end in aim, where the hardship and the danger are common to all, and the best of all are knit together in that close fellowship of sympathy, just so long will we find the incentive springing up for the formation of societies to perpetuate the memories and the fellowships. There have been many organizations formed by those who were engaged in the army and navy during the Spanish-American war, but still there are others. The latest society to be formed is the "Ancient and Honorable Order of Sons of Gunboats," and it is the outgrowth of the desire to preserve the records and the traditions of the services performed on board the flotilla of small auxiliary gunboats that were captured from Spain during the war.

It was some years after the first establishment of the gunboat service that the officers who had been assigned to these little war vessels first discussed the means that might be employed to preserve records and traditions, and well worth preserving these are telling and they do of the unexploited work that was done and of the many deeds of daring of which the world outside of that little one which engaged in it knows nothing.

History of the formation of the gun-boat flotilla dates back to the time when Dewey invested Manila with his gunboats. In complete ignorance of the situation, not even knowing that hostilities had been declared, the Cal-iao, one of the largest of the Spanish gunboats, returning from a long southern cruise, steamed into Manila bay, her newest ensign at the staff, her longest pennant at the main truck, a fresh coat of paint without and within every touch that a judicious anticipation of the Spanish admiral's expected inspection would suggest.

Wondering what so many American men-of-war were doing in the harbor, and at the absence of those flying the flag of Spain, the captain of the Cal-iao brought his little craft well under the guns of the ships which had changed the destiny of the islands before he understood. When he did, he promptly surrendered, an act of discre-

Medal of the New Order.

tion, for which he was subsequently court-martialed.

Under her new ensign the Caliao was placed under the command of Lieut. Benjamin Tappan. This was the nucleus of the flotilla that was subsequently to be drawn from Spanish forces, and as ultimately organized the gunboat fleet comprised the following: The Quirios, the Villalobos, the Samar, the Panpana, the Paraguay, the Araya, the Pinar, the Alvarez, the Leyte, the Calanman, the Mi-doro, the Marivales, the Mauleito, the Isasco, the Garibaldi and the Crdanesa.
All of these small craft were procured by Spain about the year 1905 to suppress piracy in the Philippines.

The organization of the gunboat flotilla introduced a new era. The piratical war craft, manoeuvring under sail, were powerless to contend against these naval enemies, and were driven up the rivers of Mindanao and back to their native villages for refuge.

Each gunboat was at first attached to a larger vessel, termed its "parent ship." The "parent ship" furnished officers and crew, with the exception of freemen. The latter rating was furnished throughout by Filipinos, at first merely employed, but later enlisted in the "insular force." While serving under a parent ship the tour of duty was three months, sufficient during the strenuous times immediately preceding the outbreak of the insurrection to satisfy the most ambitious.
Subsequently the gunboats were placed in independent commission, available at a moment's notice. Independently of any portion of the insurrection.

Men and officers served on their respective gunboats, seldom being away by the strength of their constitutions.
To keep alive the fellowship of fellowship and the memories of these gun-boat experiences, a meeting of all gun-boat officers present was held at Manila bay, and at the meeting the society was formed, with the purpose of maintaining that feeling of good fellowship and collecting and preserving the records and traditions.

Lady Isabel In Politics

By Mrs. Nelsh

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"My dear girl you simply must come and help me out," said Lady Isabel Etchingham; "I shall think you perfectly hateful if you don't."

"But I don't understand canvassing," I protested.

"Oh! It's quite easy," she replied, lightly; "there are only one of two simple rules for you to follow."

"As for instance?"

"Well," she said, "you must suit yourself to your constituents, especially up at a place like Bennington, where our people are mostly mechanics and working people. Of course, in dealing with the working classes you have to be a little careful," she continued, "because they are dreadfully full of common sense, and they ask you such leading and searching questions."

"Such as—"

"Oh, about the raising of wages, and the air-tightness of their houses, and all sorts of uncomfortable things like that."

"I see," I said; "and then you promise—"

"Oh, I promise anything," she asserted, gaily; "but the great thing is—she paused to emphasize her words—"the great thing is to promise things the other side haven't thought of."

"I see," I said, dryly; "and then I suppose you break your word?"

"She stared at me in genuine astonishment. "But my good child," she explained, "it's not my word, it's Mr. Ephraim Montagu's word."

"Mr. Ephraim Montagu?" I echoed.

"In an amazement that greatly exceeded hers; but I thought you were helping your husband, Lord Roberts."

"Oh, no," said Lady Isabel; "that ever put such an idea into your head? Dear old Bob isn't cut out for parliament—at any rate, not for any where he is known. You see, I know quite a lot about politics, Marjorie."

"You do, indeed?" I answered, humbly.

"You see," she continued, "there are two conservative candidates—mine, and a little man who doesn't count—and a liberal, who is certain he is going to win."

"Yes, I know the liberal to whom you refer," I said; "he is Mr. George Banks. I heard Father say he is an excellent man—not only a first-rate speaker, but thoroughly honest, too, and an altogether worthy candidate. In fact, I have heard father say that he should certainly vote for—"

"My dear Marjorie," interrupted Lady Isabel, yawning slightly, and with a faint touch of her impertinent languor, "don't bore me, there's a darling, by making a speech. Your father may be an excellent judge of honesty, but luckily he does not vote in our constituency."

"I absolutely declined to do any canvassing on behalf of Mr. Ephraim Montagu. In the first place, I had no gift that way; and in the second, I took a violent dislike to Lady Isabel's parliamentary proce."

He was a short, fat man of unmistakable origin, with an eloquent eye and a persuasive tongue; but he was so aggressively rich and so aggressively self-satisfied, and, in fact, so aggressive altogether, that it was all I could do to be civil to him.

Isabel threw her head back as she said, "heart and soul into the cause"; that is to say, she drove about in the most delightful clothes, and showered her prettiest words on her mothers, and kissed little children—or cleverly made the mothers think she had—and shook hands with people, whom she addressed as "honourable workers."

I told her I greatly disliked Mr. Ephraim Montagu, at which she seemed both astonished and a bit impatient, too.

"But he is not a man, my dear Marjorie, he is a cause. Of course, I cannot say it is better to vote for the devil himself than for the other side; and, you see, we have been conservatives for such ages and ages, I can't help doing my utmost to keep a liberal out."

"If I had a vote," I said doggedly, "I should certainly give it to Mr. George Banks; he is a much better man in every way, and I would much rather vote for him."

"Would you do that?" rejoined Lady Isabel sweetly; "then it only shows what a good thing it is that you haven't a vote. You should not be influenced by the man but by the benefit he may render to his country," she added, in the tone in which she delivers her tottiest sentiments.

"But you are promising all sorts of things you must know Mr. Montagu will never perform," I began hoily, "whereas Mr. Banks—"

But Lady Isabel softly interposed, "Have some tea, dear, and try one of these dainty little coffee-cakes. I have been talking all day and it is so silly to argue with anyone, especially when you know you're in the right."

Lady Isabel worked exceedingly hard on Mr. Ephraim Montagu's account. She interviewed miners and called upon factory hands, and bribed wives to send husbands to the poll by bestowing household gifts and by giving glowing descriptions of a rise in wages and an air-tight house.

Her labors, however, were well rewarded, for when the great day of the polling arrived, Mr. Ephraim Montagu was returned by an overwhelming majority.

"Oh, my dear, I am so thankful it over," said Lady Isabel, as she stood and looked in a deep chair. "And we can go back to town and enjoy all about these horrid old politics, Marjorie, and thoroughly enjoy the coming season."

"You have worked very hard, Isabel."

"Hard!" she echoed, "I have never worked so hard in all my life, and the things I have promised! Well, I only hope I haven't contradicted myself very, very often."

"Mr. Montagu spoke very well at the meetings," I said gradually.

"Yes," agreed Lady Isabel; "and he can't be at all 'nervy' can he? because it was simply wonderful the way he answered those unpleasant questions about that financial case he was mixed in, and that other one about the other money thing—I forget what Vernon called it."

"But it is surely easy to answer questions when you know you are innocent," I said in amazement.

"Indeed!" echoed Lady Isabel. "Why, Vernon says he is a thorough blackguard, and hopelessly dishonest."

"But surely you haven't been helping a man you know to be dishonest?"

"Only dishonest about money matters," said Lady Isabel hastily, "he swears, contentedly; 'and of course, I did it really for dear old Ver.'"

"For your husband, Isabel," I echoed; "why, you told me—"

"Of course, whom else should I possibly mean?"

"I see," I replied sarcastically; "and it was really noble of you to work so hard for this 'politically' honest man, and to absent yourself from your favorite London, even for a short three weeks."

"Yes, wasn't it? But it is always nice to feel one is in a power," she answered, contentedly; "and of course, I did it really for dear old Ver."

Directgo and Happy Heine.

DIRECTGO will make the season of 1907 and 1908 at Vancleve's farm. You have a chance to breed to a horse that is a natural fast horse and is closer kin to more fast horses than any other person's horse. A real race and road horse. His colts are sure enough good ones. They have that bold, easy way of going that causes so many of the family to trot and pace in 2:03 and 2:05. Look at the year book and you can see how many have beat 2:10. Directgo is the only one of the Directors that is standing for less than $50 a season. He is just as good and his colts will be heard from later.

I also have HAPPY HEINE. He is one of those high bred, good looking colts that can do in harness or under the saddle. Remember these horses are registered in rule No. 1. We do not have any but the best.

Directgo's fee is $20 the season, with privilege to return. Money or note due at first service.

J. E. McCown

Happy Heine will be allowed ten mares at the same fee. Not responsible for accidents.

Livery Change.

I have bought the livery business of Everts & Courtney, on North Main street, and would be glad to have my old friends and customers call on me. I am going to do a general livery business, keep none but the best help, board horses, furnish the very best rigs and guarantee satisfaction in every way. I am the oldest man in the business in the city and am not afraid to make the assertion that I will please all.

sibly want to help," she interposed impatiently.

I laughed in the midst of my astonishment.

"No, I didn't mean that. But how can you possibly help Lord Etchingham by getting Mr. Montagu into parliament?"

Lady Isabel laid her teacup carefully down upon the table, and leaning forward, looked at me with a delicate smile of explanation.

"Well, you are dear," she said slowly. "It's like this: Mr. Montagu is what is known as a financier—he's paused and looked helplessly round the room—"

"I told her I greatly disliked Mr. Ephraim Montagu, at which she seemed both astonished and a bit impatient, too."

"But he is not a man, my dear Marjorie, he is a cause. Of course, I cannot say it is better to vote for the devil himself than for the other side; and, you see, we have been conservatives for such ages and ages, I can't help doing my utmost to keep a liberal out."

Georgia Minstrels.

The extreme longevity of Richards & Pringle's Famous Georgia Minstrels is the best evidence of its worth. For over a quarter of a century the public has been amused by these entertainers. Never in the history of the "Georgias" has there been such a program of good things offered as will be seen at Holland's Opera House, Monday night, March 25.

A big new "First Part" arranged by Clarence Powell, lively with bright, new jokes and repartee. Tively music, handsome costumes, beautiful scenery and the latest in all songs and music.

Ten new vaudeville acts will be seen in the olio, concluding with the latest absurdity, "Jim Jackson."

There will be no long waits between acts. The curtain will never fall until the final act on the program.

"There is more fun than circus," is what is claimed for the "Georgias."

PLANT BEDS DESTROYED.

Ruined By Being Sowed With Grass Seed.

TRIGG COUNTY RIDERS.

Fresh Outbreak of Crime and New Methods Resorted to.

Night Riders have resumed operations in Trigg county.

A few nights ago a farmer named Wesley Barefield, between Gracey and Cerulean Springs, had his barn raided and several hundred pounds of tobacco scattered about and some of it thrown into the road.

The first of this week a new form of outrage was resorted to and a number of freshly sowed tobacco beds on the knobs in Trigg county, on the Cerulean Springs road, were ruined by being sowed thickly with red-top and timothy seed. The grass will of course choke the young plants out as soon as they appear. The plant beds belonged to Kiah Malone, W. R. Fourqurean and tenants of W. F. Cox, who lives at Gracey. Mr. Fourqurean also lives at Gracey. The victims were not members of the tobacco association.

Dr. Erwin Knocked Out.

Dr. W. Y. Erwin the corn doctor and poet, who is well known in this city, has been disbarred from practice in Kentucky, because of his failure to pass an examination. He is now at Owensboro. Dr. Erwin enjoys a reputation as a chiropodist in this part of Kentucky that the board of health cannot take from him by putting him out of business. As to his poetry—well, we have read better poetry than he writes.
